

The Intention of Sinclair Broadcasting to air a partisan attack feature without a equivalent exposure of the opposing view is a betrayal of public trust. That public trust is the basis of their license-holding. It is exactly the type of betrayal and manipulative exercise of power which opponents of media consolidation have warned about, and which the director of the FCC assured us was the last thing which consolidated media owners would attempt.

The Sinclair broadcast ,if it occurs, should be grounds for loss of license.

Sincerely,
Peter A. Corby
